Welcome from the VA OTGR Director

Welcome to the first edition of the VA Office of Tribal Government Relations (OTGR) National Monthly Newsletter. This newsletter was inspired by regional newsletters initiated by our specialists Peter Vicaire (based in Minneapolis, MN) and Terry Bentley (based in Roseburg, OR). We hope you will find stories of interest, announcements, great information and updates on issues affecting Veterans all across the country. The goal of the OTGR is to facilitate increased access to care and benefits for our Veterans in Indian Country, promote economic sustainability and implement the VA Tribal Consultation policy. This has been a busy spring for the OTGR team, we wrapped up three successful Veterans training summits held in Rapid City, SD, Pala, CA and Cherokee, NC and are looking forward to more this summer. We continue to refine and make improvements to the OTGR website and encourage you to check back often. The 2012 VA Tribal Consultation Report should be made available this summer in addition to the OTGR Strategic Plan, and we are working closely with the Veterans Benefits Administration (VBA) Loan Guaranty Office to ramp up outreach efforts focused on increasing Native American Direct Loan (NADL) MOUs with tribes, with the ultimate goal to make the dream of home ownership a reality for our Veterans and their families living on trust lands.

On the health care front, we have been very excited to see the implementation of the National Reimbursement Agreement between the VA and Indian Health Service (IHS). Signed in December 2012, the first 10 phase 1 sites are completed and the remaining IHS sites are scheduled to go “live” in June. Additionally, as of this writing, VA continues to receive letters of interest from many tribes seeking to establish reimbursement agreements with local VA Medical Centers. In a nutshell, the reimbursement agreements offer eligible, VHA enrolled American Indian/Alaska Native Veterans the choice to receive direct health care services from their local IHS or tribal health program (and have the IHS or tribal health programs reimbursed by the VA) or receive care from their VA Medical Center or Community Based Outpatient Clinic. The agreements also open doors for potential expanded partnerships and collaborations between tribes, the IHS and the VA which offers more services and access points for our Veterans living in tribal communities.

If you have any questions about how to strengthen your community’s working relationships with the VA or would like to connect with our office, don’t hesitate to email us at: tribalgovernmentconsultation@va.gov. We are passionate about the work we do and are honored to serve our Nation’s heroes. Thank you to all of our Veterans for your service. We very much look forward to visiting and working with you in the days ahead...Happy reading and Warm Regards – Stephanie

A Historic Honor for a Native American Veteran

By Gary Taylor, Reporting for SCTCA TANF

Cynthia Tyrene Sullivan doesn’t think of herself as a historical figure. But she is. On Memorial Day, Sullivan – a retired United States Army veteran and member of the Pala Band of Mission Indians – will accompany President Barack Obama as he lays a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery.

Sullivan will become the first female veteran since the Civil War to participate in the traditional ceremony honoring America’s war dead. And she will do so as a Native American who served 21 years in the U.S. Army, including deployment during the Persian Gulf War. “I am in awe – it’s a feeling you can’t imagine,” she said, shaking her head at her selection for the wreath-laying ceremony. “Never in my wildest thoughts did I ever think something like this could happen. The pride that we are going to do this, the honor that will come to Native Americans and our tribe in Pala – it’s a once in a lifetime honor.”

Sullivan will attend the ceremony with several other tribal veterans and Pala Chairman Robert Smith. The veterans will wear black slacks, white shirts and black vests listing their military units and service. They will also bring Pala’s tribal flag. Sullivan said she enlisted in the Army in 1974 when she was just 17. “My mother had to sign a waiver for me to enlist,” recalled Sullivan, who speaks softly but firmly. “I graduated high school at 16. I was too young to get hired for a job and there really wasn’t anything here for me. So I decided to go into the Army.”

She said the most difficult period of her Army career was deciding to deploy to the Middle East in 1990 during Desert Shield, which was the U.S. and Allied build-up after Iraq’s invasion of Kuwait. She had the choice not to deploy because her husband was a Marine who could have also been deployed - and they had children. Sullivan decided to deploy with her unit, the 507th Maintenance Company, 2/7th Air Defense Artillery.

“It was an extremely difficult decision,” she acknowledged. “I was given a mission, a task - and I decided to fulfill my commitment.” And, as it turned out, her husband was not deployed. When Desert Shield became Desert Storm in January of 1991, Sullivan found herself in the Persian Gulf War combat zone, where she served during the entire operation.

Remembering those days, Sullivan became somber. “Before we had deployed to the Gulf, I had made a promise to the spouses of those men and women (under my command) that I would bring them all home safely,” she said. “That’s not a promise you should make going into combat. But every soldier did make it home safely, and I am very thankful, very proud of that.” As Memorial Day nears, Sullivan admitted she is getting slightly nervous about the ceremony. She realizes it is a solemn event witnessed by millions of Americans on television and covered extensively in newspapers across the country. But Sullivan said she is focusing only on representing the men and women who have served their country. Laying the wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in memory of all those who died is not only her honor, she said, but her duty.

Reaching Out to Native American Veterans

By Gary Taylor, Reporting for SCTCA TANF

Terry Bentley has been working for the United States Veteran’s Administration for nearly three decades. She has the title to prove it - Tribal Government Relations Specialist, Western Region, for the VA’s Office of Tribal Government Relations. The region covers Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, California and Alaska.

Bentley has worked at the VA for 27 years, including positions in Portland and Roseburg, Oregon. She was at the Pala Indian Reservation in early April, coordinating the Western Region Veterans Benefits Summit. The two-day summit at the Pala Casino Spa Resort included presentations on a wide range of issues, including Native American veterans’ access to health care, benefits, services and compensation.
There were also group discussions on such difficult topics as the suicide rate among Indian veterans.

But the soft-spoken Bentley – a member of the Karuk Tribe of California – does not come across as a distant, office-bound government bureaucrat. She smiles broadly and often when she talks about her work. It’s clear she cares about Native American veterans. “My father was a vet, my grandfather was a World War II vet – I grew up around vets,” Bentley said, smiling easily. “I love working with veterans – I love working for them. I’ve been able to witness some passionate testimony from the men and women who have served this nation.”

That testimony has come from men and women, those who have suffered physical wounds and those who endured psychological trauma, non-Natives and Native Americans. “To me a vet is a vet is a vet,” she declared. “I really don’t make a distinction between Native American vets and non-Native vets. They have all served our nation.” Still, she acknowledged, over the years she has noticed there is something different about Native American vets.

“Native American vets are especially gracious, kind, very humble,” Bentley said. “They don’t really ask for much. They’ve served in such high numbers over the years but among all veterans they seek services the least. It should not be that way. Native American vets should seek VA services. They are entitled to any benefits they can get. They have sacrificed for their country.” Bentley – who is married with five children - said Native Americans have historically served in the military in disproportionate numbers compared to the rest of America’s population. Why is that?

“A tribal elder once explained it to me this way,” she said, clasping her hands together. “He told me, ‘We think of this country as our land, and we will always fight for our land – it has been ours from the beginning.’” She also said the elder pointed out Native Americans have had a “warrior culture” for centuries. “He told me, ‘Before the white man came, there were tribal rivalries. Warriors came from many tribes, and they knew how to fight. There was honor in this warrior culture.’ That hasn’t changed.”

But that doesn’t mean Indians have much faith in the government to take care of them after they have served as warriors. Bentley acknowledged the dismal history of U.S. government treatment of Native Americans has caused some Indian vets to defer or even dismiss any help from the VA.
“There has been some hesitancy among some veterans to come to the VA,” she admitted. “Some of it is the history. Some of it is the Native American culture. We take care of ourselves and then we look to our families to take care of us. So a lot of Native Americans may not look to the VA for anything. But the VA is making an effort to reach out to Native Americans – we are establishing a different culture.”

Which is one of the reasons the veteran’s summit was held on the Pala Indian Reservation, Bentley said. “It’s important for the VA to come into Indian Country to help Native American vets. We need to reach out to rural Indians.” It’s important, she said, because many Native American vets – especially those who live on reservations – are usually far from any VA medical facilities. “Most of our facilities are in urban locations,” Bentley noted. “If you’re an Indian vet living on the reservation, you’ve got to go to the city and it’s quite a distance to travel. No vet should feel forgotten.”

Bentley said even though she’s worked for the VA for many years, she doesn’t intend to slow down in her efforts to reach out to Native American veterans. “I hope to connect Native American veterans with other veterans (and) connect all of them to the right people at the VA,” she said. “Once we do that, vets can begin to get access to health care and other services and eventually some form of compensation. Veterans need to know they can’t lose hope.” Bentley hasn’t – even after nearly 30 years. Of the Pala summit, Bentley declared “If I can help even a handful of Indian veterans gain access to services and benefits they didn’t have before, or didn’t know existed, I would consider that a great success.” Bentley said this with a determination born of experience that comes from years of listening to all those who have served their country with honor, courage – and as warriors.

Funding availability for the Public Transportation on Indian Reservations

The Federal Transit Administration (FTA) has published a FY 2013 discretionary Notice of Funding Availability for the Public Transportation on Indian Reservations Program (Tribal Transit Program). This discretionary competition makes $5 million available for Fiscal Year 2013. The Notice includes FTA’s response to comments solicited in the November 9, 2012 Federal Register Notice, and program structure for both the formula and discretionary program. Proposals for the discretionary competition must be submitted by Monday, July 8, 2013. FTA will hold a webinar in early June covering program changes, as well as training on application submission.

Tribal Veterans Courts

The University of Arizona (NativeNet Professional Development Series) has put together a useful paper on the implementation of Veterans Courts within Tribal Courts. “A veterans court is a specialized court that allows veteran participants charged with a criminal offense to voluntarily participate in a judicially supervised treatment plan. These courts serve veteran participants who suffer from a serious mental health disease and/or substance abuse. In most such programs, once a veteran participant pleads guilty or no contest to at least one charge, he or she is diverted to a treatment program. His or her progress is monitored throughout the duration of the program by regular appearances in court. Successful completion of the treatment program results in dismissal of charges or reduced charges.” Click here – to get the paper. VA’s Office of Tribal Government Relations (OTGR) has also put together a Tribal Veterans Courts Guide, available online soon.

Matthias Voigt, a PhD student, is writing a thesis on American Indian war veterans and civil rights activists of the 1960s and 1970s. He is looking to travel out to Indian Country this summer and meet with veterans and civil rights activists who are interested in sharing their stories. He is looking to discuss their personal background, wartime experiences and whether/how they carried on tribal traditions through their military service. Interviews will be videotaped and then used as part of his dissertation thesis and may be copied so the veteran interviewee can receive a copy for private purposes. For more information, you can contact Matthias directly at mv1977@ymail.com or matt.voigt@web.de or you can call him at 202-300-8016.

National Veteran Small Business Conference

August 6-8, 2013 in St. Louis

The National Veterans Small Business Conference, the government’s premier event for Veteran-owned small businesses, is coming to St. Louis’ America’s Center, on Aug. 6-8, the Department of Veterans Affairs announced today. “VA is committed to bringing more Veteran-Owned Small Businesses into a public-private partnership to help them grow and succeed,” said Secretary of Veterans Affairs Eric K. Shinseki. “This event is a unique opportunity for Veteran-Owned Small Businesses to Veteran-owned business owners will receive information, tools, tips, techniques and how-to instructions to start, build and expand a small business idea into a life-changing reality. Veterans will be able to attend a wide variety of classes on business operations with more than 200 breakout sessions on how to start and grow a business and successfully compete for federal contracts. They will also have the opportunity to discuss business and contracting issues with key procurement decision makers from the federal government and private sector.

Finally, Veterans will learn how to get the Veteran-owned business certification needed to compete for federal contracts; outreach to veteran communities; and target networking to discuss government procurement and contracting requirements. There are 26 million small businesses in the United States. Of these, 3.6 million are Veteran and Service Disabled Veteran-Owned businesses. Together they employ over 1.8 million workers and generate over $1.6 trillion in revenue. VA assists Veteran-owned businesses with everything from small business start-ups to large defense contracts.

The VA St. Louis VA Health Care Systems (VASLHCS) provides inpatient and ambulatory care in medicine, surgery, neurology and rehabilitation, as well as over 35 subspecialty areas. The medical center has approximately 10,000 inpatient admissions per year and over 625,000 outpatient visits each year. It is a two-division facility that serves Veterans and their families in east central Missouri and southwestern Illinois providing ongoing care to over 57,000 veterans each year. The VASLHCS is the tertiary referral center for VA Medical Centers in Marion, Ill., and Poplar Bluff, Mo., providing inpatient acute care as well as outpatient care. VA invites all interested persons and businesses to attend. More information is available at www.nationalveteransconference.com and www.va.gov/OSDBU.

SSA Announces Mobile Site for Smartphone Users
Social Security Announces New Mobile Site for Smartphone Users
Agency Leverages Technology to Meet Customer Service Expectations.

Carolyn W. Colvin, Acting Commissioner of Social Security, today announced the agency is offering a new mobile optimized website, specifically aimed at smartphone users across the country. People visiting the agency's website, www.socialsecurity.gov, via smartphone (Android, Blackberry, iPhone, and Windows devices) will be redirected to the agency's new mobile-friendly site. Once there, visitors can access a mobile version of Social Security's Frequently Asked Questions, an interactive Social Security number (SSN) decision tree to help people identify documents needed for a new/replacement SSN card, and mobile publications which they can listen to in both English and Spanish right on their phone. "We are committed to meeting the changing needs of the American people and the launch of our new mobile site helps reinforce our online presence and adaptability to advances in technology," Acting Commissioner Colvin said. Tribal Public Health Capacity Building and Quality Improvement (CDC-RFA-OT13-1303)

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) announces availability of funds to strengthen and improve the infrastructure and performance of tribal public health agencies and tribal health systems through the provision of capacity building and quality improvement.

The Priority Area 1 awardees are expected to achieve applicant-identified outcomes from the following: improve capacity and infrastructure to support the health of the community and/or target populations, increase ability of individual community members and public health workers to serve as advocates for health improvement, disseminate lessons learned, and decrease burden of disease among AI/AN. The Priority Area 2 awardee is expected to achieve applicant-identified outcomes from the following: assess Priority Area 1 awardees' projects, evaluate tribal public health capacity building among Priority Area 1 awardees, disseminate lessons learned in order to improve tribal public health efforts for future improvements to the health of tribal populations, and provide technical assistance to Priority Area 1 awardees. In order to reduce health concerns within AI/AN populations in federally recognized tribes, the program strategies for Priority Area 1 are: (1) to develop disease interventions; (2) to strengthen and build organizational infrastructure; and, (3) to cultivate community partnerships. Under Priority Area 2, the program strategy is to conduct monitoring and evaluation for all Priority Area 1 awardees for quality improvement, and to disseminate lessons learned. Initiating tribal-specific programs will allow awardees to accelerate and expand the reach and health impact of tribal public health infrastructure. CDC/OSTLTS/Tribal Support Unit will fund federally recognized tribes in Priority Area 1 to develop disease interventions, build public health infrastructure, and cultivate community partnerships, and will fund a project evaluator in Priority Area 2 to conduct a program evaluation project. Once initial awards are made, awardees may be eligible to compete for additional funding over the course of the program. Cost sharing and matching funds are not required for this program. To be eligible to apply for this FOA, applicants must demonstrate significant experience and expertise in effectively and efficiently working in tribal communities to build tribal public health capacity (Priority Area 1) or evaluate program effectiveness (Priority Area 2).

AIWA at the 28th annual Linda Vista Parade 2013
By Roy Cook

“We came, we saw, we conquered! AIWA was, on April 27, 2013 at noon in the heart of the Linda Vista mesa overlooking the San Diego bay and at the Multi-Cultural parade. It is not a long parade but it reflects the diversity of the people from the many deployments that our military have been in hostile conflicts over the world. The American Indian Warriors Association Veterans represented our Native American Tribal pride and our patriotic commitment to the USA Constitutional government. We assembled early and prepared our Honor guard flags according to the number of troops we could call upon for the event. AIWA President William Buchanan’s truck was once again pressed into service as a rolling float for the AIWA banner and a couple of veterans, Lawrence Strickland and Roy Cook, were tailgaters with flags. The rest of the troops were motivated to walk the parade route: Joaquin Sandoval, Michael Billy, Juan del Rio, Ozzie Monje and William Buchanan.

Wow! Many ethnicities and nations were very most enthusiastic with their applause and waving signs of recognition. Our group also received many hand salutes of affirmation for our military service to this country. We were just in front of the convertible that Miss Mira Mesa was riding in. There were also: school bands, Mariachi groups, martial arts demonstrators, dragons from China and various other Asian countries, star war aficionados and a wookie, clowns, other military floats and ROTC units and the Shriners little cars weaving in and out of the rollerblade skaters. This was a great day, a short parade and a promise of festivities, food booths, carnival rides that will go into the evening’s entertainment. AIWA is happy to fulfill our participation to the urban non-Indian community in this parade. Thank you all for being there today. Also big thanks to KUSI for the TV coverage, also Bayside Community Center and AIWA members for a great time!”
